The Karsch Family

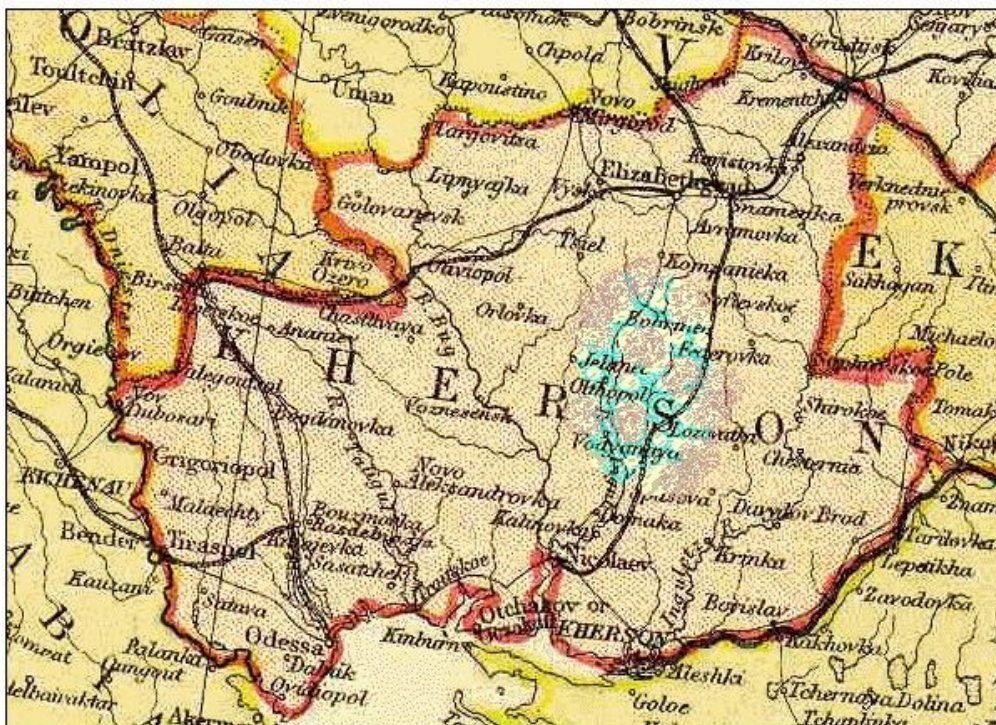

From the Ukraine to America

Kherson Gubernia, America and the Karsch Family

The Karsch family ancestral origins are from the Kherson Gubernia and the towns of Kherson and Odessa. These locations are in today's Ukraine. Little is known of the family before its arrival in the USA other than that the earliest identified ancestor was Zelig Karsch who appears to have lived somewhere in this area. Since records are kept by town no further European research is being undertaken until we are reasonably certain of the town of origin.

Kherson Gubernia was an administrative-territorial unit in Russian-ruled Southern Ukraine between the Dnieper and Dniester Rivers. One of the three gubernias created after New Russia gubernia was abolished in 1802, it was called Mykolaiv gubernia until 1803, when Kherson became the new capital. From 1809 the gubernia had five counties: Kherson, Oleksandriia, Olviopil, Tyraspil, and Yelysavethrad. Odesa County was added in 1825. Odesa and their vicinity were governed separately: Odesa by a gradonachalnik answerable directly to the tsar and (from 1822) the governor-general of New Russia and Bessarabia, and Mykolaiv by a military governor.

The gubernia had a population of about 1,330,000 in 1863, 2,027,000 in 1885, 2,733,600 in 1897, and 3,744,600 in 1914. In the 1850s Jews consisted 6 to 7 percent and in 1914, 12 percent. In-migration accounted for much of the population growth; e.g. in 1897, 46 percent of the population was born outside of the gubernia. The gubernia's economy was predominantly agricultural. Industry, consisting primarily of flour milling, distilling, metalworking industry, iron mining, beet-sugar processing, and brick industry, was underdeveloped. -- Source: Ivan Myhul, Roman Senkus abridged from The Encyclopedia of Ukraine, vol. 2 (1989).

Charles Karsch's World War I Registration

You will see names and towns and even towns spelled differently . Our ancestors did not "live" in English and thus adopted spelling variants in North America. Borders changed and towns changed names so that beyond spelling variations there may be different countries listed as their location. And thus a Karsch may be a Karsh and a Fried a Freed.

Generation 1

1. Zelig Karsch-1. He was born in Kherson, Ukraine.

Notes for Zelig Karsch:

General Notes:

The Karsch family came from Kherson Gubernia and the towns of Kherson and Odessa. Zelig is the earliest ancestor traced.

Kherson Gubernia (province), is an administrative-territorial unit in Russian-ruled Southern Ukraine between the Dnieper River and Dniester River. Kherson City became the new capital. From 1809 the gubernia had five counties and Odesa County was added in 1825. The city of Odesa (in 1803-61) and vicinity was governed separately by a gradonachalnik answerable directly to the tsar.

The gubernia had a population of about 1,330,000 in 1863, 2,027,000 in 1885, 2,733,600 in 1897, and 3,744,600 in 1914. In the 1850s Jews consisted 6 to 7 percent and in 1914, 12 percent. Immigration accounted for much of the population growth; e.g. in 1897, 46 percent of the population was born outside of the gubernia.

The gubernia's economy was predominantly agricultural. Industry, consisting primarily of flour milling, distilling, metalworking industry, iron mining, beet-sugar processing, and brick industry, was underdeveloped.

Under Soviet rule, in 1920 the Kherson gubernia's territory was divided to form the new Odesa gubernia.

THE FRIED FAMILY

THE FRIED FAMILY

At the start of our genealogical quest for Fried family roots, we gleaned basic information from certain 21st century Frieds about what they knew of their ancestors. They were familiar with only one “Edward Fried” who came to America at the turn of the century, reputed to be the son of a famous rabbi. With no more solid information, we mapped out the target “markers” required to chart our genealogical route, notably to determine details of the Frieds’ European ancestry and what we could learn of Edward’s descendants—and those of his siblings.

Today, after several months of extensive research that has spanned several continents, we have discovered a rich line of scholars and hard-working business people, men and women who took bold initiatives in a struggle to give their children a brighter future. We have made many breakthroughs in locating early ancestors and bringing to life the stories of those who played important roles in the Fried Family saga.

European Origins: Changing Borders

The first documents we tracked down for Edward Fried indicated that he left Europe in the early 1900s, with his birthplace listed as being located in the “Austro-Hungarian Empire.” Yet Edward Fried was neither a native of today’s Hungary or Austria. Europe’s ever-changing borders have wreaked havoc with town names and countries. Throughout the 1800s, the countries in which the Frieds settled continued to change allegiance, due to wars and political alliances. Just as borders changed, so did town names, making it a great challenge to identify them on such documents we obtained as US censuses, nationalization papers, Social Security applications, and the like. Today, the cities and towns where we have recorded two centuries of Fried ancestors lie in Slovakia, Hungary, Croatia, the Czech Republic, and other surrounding nations.

Unearthing the Family’s Great Rabbis

As mentioned, family tradition told that Edward Fried’s father was considered a great rabbi of his day. Our search through a host of rabbinic reference books of old eventually resulted in an undisputable corroboration of this fact. According to the book Shem Hagedolim (The Names of the Great Rabbis) by Pinchas Schwartz, a certain “Rabbi Mordechai ben (son of) Rabbi Meir Fried” of Hungary was listed as being a noted rabbi in the mid-1800s. Moreover, Mordechai’s father, Rabbi Meir Fried, was also cited as a great rabbi and commentator. Further research has now revealed that Rabbi Meir Fried’s father Avram served as a Shamas (rabbi’s personal assistant). To date, this Rabbi Avram Fried, born during the last decades of the 1700s, is the earliest Fried ancestor we have traced.

To delve further into the Fried rabbinic ancestry, we concentrated our efforts on locating sefarim (religious books) written by one or all of these family members, since it was common practice to begin such books with a listing of the author’s family genealogy. And, once we pinpointed the European locale of these early Frieds (details in the next section), we commissioned the services of a local Hungarian researcher to search for existing civil records. As of now, we have the following information:

According to the Hungarian Lexicon (Dictionary) of Famous Hungarian Jewish Figures, Avram Fried’s son Rabbi Meir Boskowitz Fried was born in about 1804 in Boskowitz, Moravia (today’s Czech Republic). Rabbi Meir was a pupil of the renowned “Chatam Sofer” (Rabbi Moshe Sofer - Schreiber, 1763-1840), a leading rabbi and commentator of the century. Rabbi Meir Fried served as a rabbi in the town of Ogyallan, and authored a book of Talmudic commentary, Meir Einei

Chachamim (Enlightenment of the Wise), published in Vilna 1886. The book also brought fame to Rabbi Meir's son-in-law, Rabbi Jonas Mann, who financed the publication. The title page of the book informs us that Rabbi Meir Fried headed the Rabbinic Court (Beit Din) of Diälla (?) in Hungary. Rabbi Meir Fried died in 1859 in Ogyallan.

Rabbi Meir's most renowned child was Rabbi Mordechai Fried, born in 1827 in Dunajska Streda, Slovakia. According to the Hungarian Lexicon of Famous Hungarian Jewish Figures, Rabbi Mordechai Fried served as a rabbi in Győrfejtő, Asszonyfan and then Dunaszerdahly (near Bratislava). The rabbi gained distinction as the author of Baruch Mordechai (Blessed is Mordechai), a commentary on the Talmudic tractate of Blessings, published in Lemberg in 1874. Although he died in 1913, Rabbi Mordechai Fried's important book lives on, with editions still available both in print and online.

The book Baruch Mordechai provides us with a fascinating glimpse at Rabbi Mordechai Fried's colleagues and family. As was the custom, the work begins with three testimonials by distinguished rabbinical authorities. Praising the author and his sharp, brilliant commentary were two fellow rabbis from the area, Yoel Unger Rechnitz and Chaim Zvi Manheimer, as well as the very prominent head of the Rabbinical Court of Lemberg (then the capital of Galicia, Austria), Rabbi Yosef Shaul Halevi Natinsohn. Rabbi Mordechai Fried's introduction to the book includes dedications to loved ones and supporters, providing us with a poignant personal perspective. Among those mentioned are his mother, "the Rebbetzen (rabbi's wife) 'Chana'le" (a term of endearment for 'Chana'), saying "G-d prolonged her days and she lived to witness children and grandchildren studying the Torah and earning their livelihood; she was privileged to see their contentment as she lived in wealth, with no distress in a long and good life, and her reward was a cornerstone for the coming days where she may rest in peace." Of his wife, Rachel, Rabbi Fried wrote, "Her husband's heart confided in her as she took upon herself with me the Torah ways.... Together with me she saw sons and grandchildren and their descendents learning the Torah."

Solving the Mystery of the Family Names and Origins

One additional clue we were given by the family about Edward Fried was that he had a relative, probably a brother, named Max Fried who had lived in Seattle. We set about to search for his records and determine how he was related to Edward—and whatever details his records would shed on the Fried family's origins. Yet when we sought information on Max Fried, some very mysterious information evolved. On his 1902 passport application, Max Fried—who had come to America before Edward—listed his birth name not as Fried, but rather "Boscowice." Further, it stated that he was from the town of Asszonyfa.

Was this passport application for the wrong Max Fried? Did Max Boscowice randomly take the name Fried and was not a blood relative? Was he the son of a previous marriage? Did all the Fried's previously have the same name?

Fortunately, the passport application in question also included Max's son Arthur, proving that this was indeed the person we sought, as the family knew Arthur to be a cousin. The other question this data raised was that if Edward and Max were not Fried, was the connection to Rabbi Mordechai not a valid one? As we did our Hungarian research, one piece fell into place. Shem Hagedolim (The Names of the Great Rabbis) noted Rabbi Meir's surname as Fried-Boskowitz. This was a strong indication that he got his name from the town of "Boskowitz," (now "Boskovice") in the Czech Republic, constituting another potential clue to the Fried family's ancestry. Rabbi Fried had been Rabbi there and as was the custom he was known by the name of the town.

What Are the Fried Family's Ancestral Towns?

The rabbinical sources we've mentioned provided more crucial pieces of information. Shem Hagedolim lists Rabbi Mordechi ben Meir Fried as hailing from "Asszonyfa" (the same town noted in Max Fried's passport) and then "Gyorszentmarton" ("Martinsberg" in German). As we began our Hungarian research, we discovered that "Asszonyfa" is today known as "Gyorasszonyfa." The name of town changed to "Pannonhalma" after 1945.

Rabbi Mordchai is listed as having died in 1913 in "Dunaszerdahely." This became quite logical as we read that his father, Rabbi Meir, served as the rabbi of "Ogyalla" (in Yiddish "Yalle"), today's Hurbanovo, Slovakia.

What Has our Hungarian Research Revealed?

Now that we have more complete Hungarian records, we know that Rabbi Meir Fried was born in Boskowitz, formerly in Moravia (now Boskovice, Czech Rep.), in or about 1804. He settled in Hungary possibly in 1824. The rabbi and scholar married Hani Spitzer, probably in Dunaszerdahely, formerly Pozsony/Pressburg County (now Dunajska Streda, Slovakia). Their sons Mordechai and Jakob were born there. The family then moved to Komarom/Komarno, and settled in Ogyalla/Hurbanovo in the early 1840s.

Apparently the Naszvad/Nesvady resident "Moritz Fried" listed in 1848 census, was the same Mordechai Fried. He is listed as born in Dunaszerdahely in 1827, and in 1846 having married Rosa Weiss of Naszvad, a daughter of Abraham Weiss (from Szollos, Nitra County), and Esther Klekner (from Nagysurany). It is most probable that Naszvad residents Leopold Weiss, and Sara Roth nee Weiss were Rosa's siblings.

Rabbi Meir Fried passed away in 1859 in Ogyalla. The death entry listed him as married, indicating that his wife was still alive that year. An entry of her death was not found, but the 1877-1885 years are missing from the Ogyalla records.

R' Meir's son R' Mordechai Fried and Rosa Weiss had two children born in Naszvad: Salamon in 1847/1848, and Lasar in 1850. Their next child Moses was born in Asszonyfa in 1853. Ezechiel (who we know as Edouard) was born on September 6, 1855.

Ezechiel (Edouard) married Mari Brock from Boldogasszony/Frauenkirchen, who gave birth to Miksa in Szentmiklos in 1881.

In the Ogyalla records, data exists on Gaspar Fried, Gerson Fried, Leopold Fried, and Jakab Fried, although it is not certain that they were related.

America and Europe: A Life or Death Choice

Regardless of their glorious rabbinical heritage, by the end of the 19th century, with pogroms sweeping Eastern Europe, many of the Frieds--including Max and Edward--picked up roots to flee to the freedom of America. Not all of their children followed, nor did numbers of other relatives who remained in Europe. Their fate eventually became a tragic one, as Nazi murderers annihilated them along with six million Jewish martyrs. Otto Fried, who survived World War II and gave careful testimony to Yad Vashem to honor the memory of each family member who fell, helped preserve the legacy of these men, women and children. This Family Tree is an additional effort to insure that their memory be eternal.

The American Experience

The youngest of Edward and his wife Maria Brock's eleven children was Elizabeth Elsie Fried, born April 25, 1904 in Nagymaros, Hungary. Her arrival in the U.S. was somewhere between 1902-1908, and around 1922 she married Charles Harry Karsch in Chicago, Illinois.

The story of the Family in America is detailed in Avraham Fried and his descendants.

You will see names and towns and even towns spelled differently . Our ancestors did not "live" in English and thus adopted spelling variants in North America. Borders changed and towns changed names so that beyond spelling variations there may be different countries listed as their location. And thus a Karsch may be a Karsh and a Fried a Freed.

Not yet integrated into this work are the interviews undertaken in Israel by Blair. He was fortunate to have the opportunity to interview both Otto Fried and Ilana Fried.

Notes for Arthur Freed:

General Notes:

Arthur Freed was a highly successful lyricist whose first hit was ICried for You (1923). He teamed with Nacio Herb Brown for Hollywood Music Box Revue of 1928, which produced Singin in the Rain, and they scored The Broadway Melody of 1929, which won an Academy Award for Best Picture.

Generation 5 (con't)

After two follow-ups to that film, in 1936 and 1938, Freed was itching to produce movies. He convinced Louis B. Mayer to purchase the rights to The Wizard of Oz by L. Frank Baum, and Mayer made him associate producer. But Freed's genius in selecting E.Y. (Yip) Harburg and Harold Arlen to create the lyrics and music for the film put his stamp on it. He went on to produce several Judy Garland/Mickey Rooney vehicles, Academy Award winners An American in Paris and Gigi and many other hits.

His legendary coterie of musical colleagues at MGM, known as the FreedUnit (the subject of a documentary called Musicals Great Musicals), is often credited with lending a distinctive sound to the Hollywood musical. However, Freed's success as a producer didn't stop him from writing, and in 1952 he teamed again with Brown to score the quintessential musical Singin' in the Rain.

-- Sandra Burlingame

Popular songwriter--notably in collaboration with Nacio Herb Brown--who joined MGM with the advent of sound and produced virtually every great Hollywood musical of the 1940s and 50s. Freed gathered around him such luminaries as Vincente Minnelli, Gene Kelly, Syd Charisse, Fred Astaire and Judy Garland, and produced classic films including the all-black "Cabin in the Sky" (1943), "Meet Me in St. Louis" (1944), "On The Town" (1949), "Singin' in the Rain" (1952) and "Silk Stockings" (1957).

Who is Blair Adam Karsch and How am I Related to Him

You may not know who Blair Adam Karsch is and so a few words about him and a chart about how you are related to him follows

About Blair Karsch -- Born in Indianapolis, Indiana, Blair Karsch has devoted his life to encouraging high school students to make the right life choices. Through a television talk show, speaking engagements, a book of poetry he has written and his work as a substitute teacher, Blair has become a visible and remembered personality among youth.

During his own high school years, Karsch attended North Central High School in Indianapolis, where he participated in many extra-curricular activities including student council and tennis, which he still plays today. He graduated in 1976, in a class that also included national recording artist Kenneth "Babyface" Edmonds and astronaut David Wolf.

After high school, Blair earned degrees in political science, psychology at Indiana University in Bloomington, where he minored in telecommunications. Following graduation in the summer of 1980, Blair moved to California to pursue a dream in show business.

Although he worked as an extra in such shows as the A-Team, Cheers, Dynasty, Hotel, and The Love Boat, and had a small role in Fatal Pulse, Blair decided that the life of an extra just wasn't for him. "I was getting up at six in the morning and playing cops and robbers or drinking fake beer and eating peanuts," he says. "It didn't offer me the depth my soul was searching for."

The depth that Karsch wanted was working with youth. He began working as a substitute teacher and – on a shoe-string budget - taping a youth talk show called On Your Level for television. On Your Level had a town hall setting, with audiences ranging from three people to audiences of fifty. Instead of focusing the show on himself as a host, Karsch often turned the cameras on the youth, talking with them and leading discussions about issues of importance to them.

"I don't want to sound like a preacher, but I believe that in the 30 minutes I casually shared with these kids, it was possible to realign their perspectives," he says. "I wanted them to share with me what was going on. I also wanted the kids to have the guts to tell me when I was wrong."

While working on the show, Blair also compiled a book of poetry for youth, Bigger Than Cool. "Kids need a connection to why they're in school," he explains. "Hopefully, this book will give them some sort of connection."

In early 1999, Blair launched his own Web site, BlairKarsch.com, while continuing to substitute in more than 60 schools - over six school systems - and work with youth councils and various agencies to get his show produced and shown on other Indianapolis television stations.

Blair is a vegetarian and an active member of the Jewish faith. In his spare time, he enjoys playing basketball and running. He draws inspiration from personalities including Robert F. Kennedy, Martin Luther King, Jr., Gil Scott Herron and Dick Gregory. He also loves listening to music by Bob Dylan, John Hiatt, Joni Mitchell, Bonnie Raitt, Jackson Brown and Kenneth "Babyface" Edmonds. When he's not busy substituting, he often lends his passion to youth advocacy, politics, social activism and the abolition of the death penalty.
